The parish church of St John which was built in the 15th century and then restored in 1923/1924 by Sir Robert Lorimer and was the stage for the reformer John Knox to launch his campaign against idolatry. His sermon led to the "purging" of churches and the destruction of monasteries.

Lunch on own

In the afternoon, enjoy a visit to the Scone Palace, situated near the old but now non-existent abbey of Scone where Scottish monarchs from Kenneth II to James IV were crowned. In the ninth century Kenneth MacAlpin chose Scone as the royal residence and brought the Scottish coronation "Stone of Scone" here, but in 1297 Edward I took it to Westminster Abbey in London where it remained until being returned in 1996! Porcelain from Meissen, Sèvres and Derby, fine Chippendale furniture, 17th and 18th century ivory carvings and some extremely unusual papier mâché objets d'art (ca.1730) by the Parisian Martin brothers are the principal art treasures on view inside. The surrounding parkland boasts a number of rare trees
